NO FAVORS IN JOLIET PRISON

Loeb and Leopold to Receive Same Treatment as Others.

FIRST NIGHT IN "SOLITARY"

Will Be Separated Possibly Never to Meet Again for Years, Although Under the Same Roof—Youth Alone Saved the Pair From the Gallows, Chief Justice Caverly Says—Sentence Reviewed.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Sentenced to life imprisonment on the murder charge and to terms of 99 years for the kidnaping, Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, slayers of Robert Franks, the schoolboy, will receive exactly the same treatment accorded other prisoners in the state prison at Joliet.

Warden John L. Whitman said the boys would be assigned to manual labor of some kind in the shops. Their first night in prison will be spent in "court solitary," and it is in "court solitary" that they will first be separated, possibly never to meet or speak to another again for years, although under the roof of the same institution. "Court solitary" is a remnant of an old statute providing that each prisoner must spend his first day and one day in each year in prison in solitary confinement. The youths will be placed in separate rooms for their first night here.

Under the double sentence Leopold and Loeb can not be released on parole until they have served more than 37 years in the Joliet penitentiary. The life term alone would have permitted such release after about 20 years. Their youth alone saved them from the gallows. Judge Caverly urged that the parole privilege be never extended to the self-confessed doers of what he called "an abhorrent crime." He found no mitigating circumstances in the evil deed itself, its motive or lack of motive, or in the personalities and antecedents of the boys; but he said he chose imprisonment instead of death because of the age of the defendants.

The judge said: "This determination appears to be in accordance with the progress of criminal law all over the world and with the dictates of enlightened humanity. More than that, it seems to be in accordance with the precedents hitherto observed in this state. The records of Illinois show only two cases of minors who were put to death by legal process, to which number the court does not feel inclined to make an addition."

State Has No Appeal.

The court held that the analyses of the boys' lives and present mental, emotional and ethical condition was an "invaluable contribution to criminology," but he declared that application of such material to crime was a subject for legislative, rather than judicial determination.

Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, and formerly himself an occupant of the place held by Judge Caverly, said: "While I do not intend and have no desire to criticize the decision of the court, I still believe that death is the only penalty feared by murderers."

The state has no appeal from the court's decision.

The sentences constituted a complete victory for the defense, whose sole fear was a sentence of death by hanging, as the offenses of murder and kidnaping are capital crimes in Illinois. The boys pleaded guilty to both offenses. Judge Caverly explained that he did not mete out the death sentence because the two millionaire youths are under age.

Members of the two families hurried from the court and drove home. "I am glad it is all over," Leopold, Sr., declared. Allan Loeb said: "It was a just sentence. There was nothing else for the court to do." Jacob Loeb, uncle of Richard, said: "There is nothing to say. We are thankful."

Clarence Darrow, the veteran criminal lawyer, who fought against hanging the boys, refused to be congratulated. Smiling only faintly when friends crowded about him to shake his hand, Darrow bowed his head, saying: "No, no—it isn't a victory. Please don't congratulate me. Of course we're glad they were not doomed to death, but how can it be a victory when two boys are sentenced to spend the rest of their lives behind prison bars and cold stone walls."

Name Millionaire for Governor.
Wilmington, Sept. 11.—The caucus of the Democratic state convention nominated Joseph Bancroft, millionaire textile manufacturer of Wilmington, for governor.

To Bring Back Kirby.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—District Attorney Bernstein announced that Josiah Kirby, former president of the Cleveland Discount company, under arrest in California on a federal warrant issued here charging use of the mails to defraud, will be brought back to testify before the federal grand jury, which convenes Oct. 8. Postal inspectors will leave here Monday for Los Angeles, where Kirby is at liberty under a $10,000 bond.

La Follette's Plans.

Washington, Sept. 11.—It was announced at independent headquarters that Senator La Follette will deliver his first campaign speech in New York city Sept. 18. By the end of the month the senator expects to start out on a speaking tour which may take him to the Pacific coast. At intervals during the campaign he intends to make use of the radio for broadcasting of brief campaign speeches.

WOMEN CONTROL COMMITTEE

Twenty-Three on Republican Executive Body.

ORGANIZATION IS PERFECTED

Warner of Marion Named as Chairman and Mrs. Todd of Youngstown Secretary—Borah or Capper Sought as Speakers for the Campaign Opening—Proceedings of the Meeting at Columbus.

Columbus, Sept. 11.—Charles G. Dawes, Republican candidate for vice president, is not likely to come, to Ohio for the opening of the Republican campaign at Marion on Sept. 27. Word to this effect was received by the Republican state campaign committee of nine, of which Clarence J. Neal of Cleveland is chairman.

At a meeting here the campaign committee decided to make an effort to get either Senator William Borah or Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas as the main attraction for the Marion opening. The presence of John L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers' union of America, also is desired. The committee named Don V. Parker of Ashtabula, former state prohibition commissioner, chairman of the speakers' bureau. Parker now is employed as special counsel in the attorney general's office. J. O. Mills of Columbus was made secretary of the campaign committee.

It was announced that Charles G. Dawes would be brought into Ohio later in the campaign. The Republican state central committee, which also held a meeting at headquarters, approved the selections for women members' from the districts which were recommended by the district committeemen. It also voted to retain Walter Rogers of Newark in his present position as secretary and Mrs. Jane Fuller as assistant secretary.

Women will control the Republican state executive committee, which was organized by the selection of Fred W. Warner of Marion as chairman, Mrs. Wilmer H. Crawford of Cincinnati, vice chairman, and Mrs. Anna S. Todd of Youngstown, secretary.

Mrs. Todd was added to the committee as a member-at-large from the state, giving the women 23 members and the men 22. Women members from all the districts except the Twenty-second were formally approved by the central committee.

The central committee decided to keep its headquarters here open and re-elected Walter C. Rogers of Newark as executive secretary, and Mrs. Jane Blair Fuller of Columbus, private secretary to Chairman Warner. Both Mr. Rogers and Miss Fuller are to co-operate with the campaign chairman in whatever duties he assigns them.

Mrs. John Gordon Battelle, Republican national committeewoman from Ohio, in a conference at Chicago with Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice chairman, outlined plans for a state-wide rally of Ohio Republican women, Friday night, Oct. 3, at Woodman's Hall, Columbus. Harry L. Davis, candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, will be the principal speaker. This meeting is being arranged for under the direction of the Women's Republican Club of Ohio, of which Mrs. Battelle is president.

POPE REPLIES TO CRITICS

Claims Right to Take Hand In Politics When Church Is Involved.

Rome, Sept. 11.—Pope Pius has replied to critics of the vatican who believe the holy father should not participate in politics with a statement that asserts the papal right to take a hand in political matters whenever the church is involved. "It is heard here and there that the pope should not mix into politics," the holy father told members of the Catholic University federation, following a convention at Palermo. "But when politics gets close to the altar, then religion, the church and the pope have the right and duty to give counsel and direction which the Catholic people have the right to ask and the duty to follow."

In conclusion the pontiff said he regretted to see Catholics divided amongst themselves and adhering to the activities of a party which boasted its opposition to every religious creed.

OHIO HAPPENINGS

Fliers Expected Saturday.

Dayton, O., Sept. 11.—The world fliers are expected to leave Washington Saturday for this city. The delay is due to a desire to give the fliers an opportunity to participate in the Defense day test in the national capital on Friday. Mayor Frank B. Hale announced that the prospect of one day or more of delay in the world fliers reaching Dayton would have no effect in changing the existing plans for their welcome when they land at McCook field. The program as it is now arranged will be carried out, whenever they arrive, rain or shine, he said.

Denounce Caverly's Sentence.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Common pleas judges here are almost unanimous in denouncing Judge Caverly's sentence of life imprisonment for the Franks slayers. Judge A. J. Newcomb: "It is a serious miscarriage of justice, and sets a very dangerous precedent." Judge A. G. Pearson: "The decision of Judge Caverly will do more harm than any decision ever rendered." Judge Carl V. Weygandt: "I think Judge Caverly needlessly placed himself in an unfortunate position."

Would Audit State's Accounts.

Columbus, Sept. 11.—Suggestion that the Ohio Society of Certified Public Accountants' convention at Dayton, Sept. 19, be asked to audit the state's accounts and report on the accomplishments of the Davis and Donahey administrations, was made by Charles H. Hubbell of Cleveland in a telegram to Governor Donahey. Hubbell was a candidate in 1922 for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

75-Cent Gas Rate Adopted.

Cincinnati, Sept. 11.—City council passed the proposed compromise gas ordinance for the second time. Decision was reached to hold another meeting, when the proposed measure will be put on the calendar for final passage. The new ordinance provides for a rate of 75 cents a thousand cubic feet for the initial 5,000 cubic feet consumed.

To Begin Drive For Funds.

Columbus, Sept. 11.—The La Follette-Wheeler campaign committee in Franklin county started to raise $5,000 to conduct the campaign here. The committee expects to follow the national policy of drawing its subscriptions from the workers, depending largely upon gifts from $1 to $5.

Dry Agent's Scalp Sought.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—County Prosecutor Stanton filed quo warranto proceedings as a test case asking the removal of Howard Prechtel, special dry constable, Berea, working out of a justice's court. The case will determine the legality of all such appointments.

Struck by Train.

Dayton, O., Sept. 11.—Clyde Smith, 28, of West Alexandria, was killed and John Ozias, 25, also of West Alexandria, was slightly injured when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a train near Eaton.

Two Struck by Automobile.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Edward Nevar was killed instantly by an auto here and his companion, Mike Kopranic, is in a hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, 75, of Cambridge, Mass., national authority on physical education, died at the Sargent girls' camp. Great Northern railway almost doubled its net income in 1923, the annual report revealed.

DEFENDING ARMY GAINS GROUND

Hostilities Resumed All Along the Shanghai Front.

INVADING FORCE PUSHED BACK

Two Thousand International Troops Guarding the Boundary of the Foreign Quarter of Shanghai Are Reinforced by Local Volunteers and Are Equipped With Armored Cars and Machine Guns.

Shanghai, China, Sept. 11.—Dispatches received here state that General Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian dictator, has started mobilization of his military forces. He recently declared war on the Peking government.

Hostilities were resumed along the battle front south and west of Shanghai between the forces of rival military governors battling for possession of Shanghai. Reports from the Lung-wha headquarters of the defending forces said that additional advances were made against the invading forces in the Iling sector, west of Taihu Lake, 90 miles west of Shanghai. The Chekiang troops reported the capture of the village of Susan in their drive to take Iling. The drive on Iling is part of the campaign to take Changchow, the point from which the defending forces hope to attack the Kiangsu troops from the rear line on the Shanghai-Nanking railway.

Two thousand marines are guarding the boundary of the foreign settlement. Despite the nearness of the fighting, the Americans and other foreigners in Shanghai are confident that General Chi Hsieh Yuan will not permit their quarter to be attacked even if he captures the city. No one is greatly worried, except over the possibility of defeated troops of General Lu's army pouring pell-mell into the settlement in case of a rout.

The marines have taken every possible precaution at the barricades and strengthened the boundary's defenses at weak points. They have been reinforced by local volunteers and are equipped with six armored cars and many machine guns. A proclamation of martial law warns the belligerents not to enter the foreign section.

COUZENS DEFEATS JUDGE TUTTLE

Is Nominated for Senator by a Large Plurality.

Detroit, Sept. 11.—Returns from the state-wide primary show that Senator James Couzens has been nominated for United States senator over Judge J. Arthur Tuttle by a safe plurality.

Couzens has a lead in excess of 50,000. The senator went into the lead when figures became available from Wayne county, (Detroit) his greatest stronghold, where the count was delayed by the long ballot.

The contest for the Republican gubernatorial nomination proved easy for Alex. J. Grossbeck, incumbent, seeking a third term. He has a lead of 160,000 over his nearest competitor, James W. Hamilton, sponsor of the proposed anti-parochial school amendment.

Mortimer E. Cooley was unopposed for the Democratic senatorial nomination and Edward Frensdorff had only slight opposition for the gubernatorial choice. The opposition to Frensdorff developed at the last moment, when an attempt was made to run H. Dale Souter of Grand Rapids on stickers. The Democratic vote was extremely light.

In the congressional contests all incumbents who had opposition appeared to have been renominated.

Valuable Gems Stolen.

New York, Sept. 11.—Theft of a fortune in jewels from two members of the Prince of Wales party on Long Island was revealed by the police. Lady Mountbatten and Mrs. Richard Norton, both of whom accompanied the prince and his party to this country, were the victims. The jewels were stolen from the home of J. S. Cosden, where the Mountbattens and Mrs. Norton were guests. Valuable gems belonging to Mrs. Cosden were also taken.

KIDNAPING CHARGED

Cleveland Girl-Wife, Missing for Two Weeks, Located in Akron.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Anna Iacavanazzi, 17, missing from her home here since Labor day, was reunited with her 4-year-old son, Ralph, at the home of her parents here. The girl-mother was found in Akron and brought to Cleveland by detectives. She told detectives she had been seized by three men and taken to Canal Dover, but had not been harmed. On the strength of her story a man booked as Matteo Nobli, 36, was charged at central police station with kidnaping. Warrants for kidnaping have been issued for two other men. The girl said she was kept a prisoner in a Cleveland boarding house for a week before being taken to Akron.

To Probe Fraud Charges.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 11.—The September grand jury will convene Sept. 11 and Prosecutor Maxwell said that he will investigate the charges of alleged election law violations at the recent primaries if requested to do so or if the evidence is submitted. Leaders of the Ransbottom-Ledman organization allege irregularities in several county precincts and maintain that they will submit the facts to the prosecutor in time for a grand jury investigation.

TO VOTE ON MERGER PLAN

Ohio Conference of Methodist Church Gets Under Way.

Ironton, O., Sept. 11.—The annual meeting of the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church got under way in the First Methodist Episcopal church here. The sessions are to continue through Friday. Assignments of pastors for the coming year in the conference will be made Saturday. The conference is expected to take up the proposed merger with the West Ohio conference during its sessions. Such a move was voted down at Ada by the West Ohio conference last week. Several changes in Columbus pastors are expected to be made in the new assignments.

GILLETT WINS

Captures Republican Nomination for United States Senator.

Boston, Sept. 11.—Frederick H. Gillett, speaker of the house of representatives and a member of congress for over 20 years, won the Republican nomination for United States senator at the state primary. There was no opposition on the Democratic ticket in the senatorial and gubernatorial race and Senator David I. Walsh was renominated to succeed himself and James M. Curley, mayor of Boston, was nominated for governor. On the Republican ticket Lieutenant Governor Alvin T. Fuller was the winner over James Jackson for the governorship nomination.

Louis A. Coolidge, a "wet," was Gillette's nearest competitor. Coolidge is not a relative of the president.

Not Unusual to Find Humor Among Thieves

Criminals have almost invariably a sense of humor that proves their humanity, says G. S. Dougherty in the Saturday Evening Post. They especially relish a laugh when it is on themselves.

A rope ladder thief had successfully finished one of his difficult jobs. Fastening a rope ladder to a chimney on a roof he had to climb down to a window below, force an entrance, climb up with his loot and make his getaway.

Coming out of the door he saw his shadow in the yard and was so nervous that he fired at it, thereby bringing about his arrest. A mishap of that kind will cause great mirth in criminal circles.

A pickpocket worked all summer without an accident. Every week he sent a good proportion of his money home to his sister and mother. Coming home himself, after warm greetings, he wanted to know what had been done with the money.

"Why, Jim, I'll tell you," said the sister, hesitating a little. "You're in such a dangerous business that we often feel worried about you, so we gave the money to buy a stained glass window in the church."

After his arrest, a skillful counterfeiter told me how his undoing came about. He had been a sign painter and was decidedly artistic and skillful. Coming to New York he took a downtown office, painted "Real Estate" on the door, and used it as a workshop for painting imitation banknotes.

He said that though it took no more time or work to imitate a $100 bill than a $20, he had to make five $20s to get change for $100, because the $20 bills were more easily passed.

It was a $100 counterfeit that led to his downfall. Finishing it late one afternoon, he started for home, but stopped in a lower West side saloon to buy a drink and a bottle of whisky. Laying his $100 imitation banknote on the bar, it came in contact with a little spilled whisky and the colors ran, leading to his arrest.

Some years later I saw him in a penitentiary and said, "Well, Emanuel, I see you're still working at the old line." He was plying a brush, whitewashing a prison wall.

EXPLORERS SEEK HARDY PLANTS IN NORTH CHINA

Department of Agriculture Men Hope to Find Many Valuable Strains of Cereals There.

Washington.—To seek new plants for cultivation in this country, P. H. Dorsett, for 25 years with the office of foreign seed and plant introduction of the United States Department of Agriculture, and his son, J. H. Dorsett, left this country recently for Shanghai, where they will begin a three-year plant exploration trip in China. Mr. Dorsett is a well-known scientist and was one of the foundation builders of the bureau of plant industry, says the announcement of the department telling of the trip. He has been on several plant exploration trips and made an extensive search in Brazil.

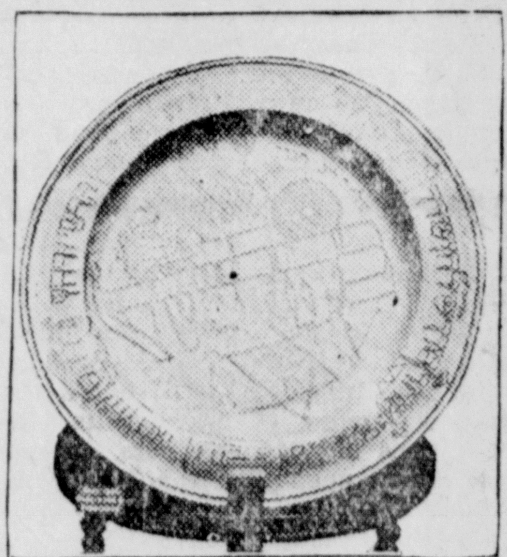

In the course of a long stay in northern China the two investigators will search particularly for hardy plants for cultivation in this country's northern Great Plains region. The work will differ from ordinary plant exploration, it is explained, in that instead of traveling widely the scientists will concentrate on a small area and study intensively the more important crop plants there. Other investigators in China have shown that there are in the gardens, fields and orchards of that country many varieties of fruits, vegetables and field crops still unknown and which may prove valuable in this country.

"Many interesting strains of wheat, barley and other cereals are known to exist in Manchuria and northern China," says the department. "Some of these are likely to prove of great value in the United States. Soy beans, rapidly becoming an important crop in this country, are extensively cultivated in northern China, and many varieties will be introduced for trial. Hardy forage crops likely to prove of value in the Great Plains region also will be secured. The Dorsetts will search for these plants and will send roots, cuttings or seeds for propagation and trial in department gardens. "The department has in mind hardy Chinese bush cherries, which preliminary investigations have shown to be adapted as far north as Mandan, N. D., and whose fruit is similar to the sour cherry of this country and used in the same way. Attempts will be made to find superior varieties of blight-resistant Chinese chestnuts, which the gradual destruction of the chestnuts of this country by blight has rendered important to secure.

Attention also will be given to the introduction of hardy shade and wind-break trees able to withstand the severity of the winters of the northern Great Plains region. It is probable that Manchuria may furnish many such trees. For the Western states the explorers expect to obtain superior varieties of Japanese persimmons and of the Chinese jujube. Other Chinese fruits of probable value for which they will search are peaches, pears, apricots and plums, all of which exist in wide variety. Many varieties of these fruits are now being grown here, but large numbers of them are yet to be tested.

"The explorers go provided with necessary materials for packing and shipping seeds and plants which will be shipped from Shanghai to Washington, where they will be inspected and freed from any diseases or pests before they are sent to the gardens for preliminary trial and propagation. On this exploration Mr. Dorsett and his son will travel in the provinces of Chihli and Shansi, and in Manchuria."

Oldest Plate Presented to National Museum

What is probably the oldest plate in the world has been presented to the National Museum in Washington by Miss Lella Lieberman of Washington. For more than a thousand years the relic has been handed down through succeeding generations in the Lieberman family. The plate, which is about fourteen inches in diameter, was originally owned by King David and it bears the crest of the famous monarch. Along the outer rim of the plate are engraved characters setting forth the use of the plate and a record of the various branches of the family through which it has passed.

Find Coin of 1150

Armstrong, Mo.—A coin, bearing the date of 1150 and the image of Queen Mary, was plowed up the other day by P. W. Shiffert, a farmer near here. The coin is made of green gold, the metal used in ancient times for coining money, and, besides, the date and the image of the queen, is marked with a cross, ten stars and has a ring soldered to it, having evidently been used as a watch charm at one time.

Farming in Portugal

Portugal will aid its agriculture by supplying farmers with implements and fertilizers and instruction in how to use them. The scheme, as announced by Doctor Oliveira of the Banco Agricola of Lisbon, involves teaching the unskilled farmer to get the most possible from his soil by means of intensive cultivation. The government will supply the necessary agricultural machinery and will also designate one or more directors who will have the supervision of the work undertaken. There is no intention to profit at the expense of the farmer, it is announced, and all profits gained by the intensive and systematic cultivation practiced will revert to the owner. There is a shortage of animal power in the country districts and this fact, it is thought, will stimulate the demand for tractors.

To Fit the Price

A Topeka physician prescribed orthoform for a patient. This is a powerful medicine in powdered form for use in serious throat infections. The physician didn't say how much to get or intimate what the cost might be. The man of the house walked into a drug store.

"Want some orthoform," he said. "All right, how much of it?" asked the druggist. "What does it cost?" "Sixty-four dollars a pound." "Gimme two drams."—Kansas City Star.

Elephants Increasing

Laws to protect elephants in Africa have apparently begun to accomplish their purpose, for the animals are again increasing in numbers. Only a few years ago more than 50,000 elephants a year were slaughtered for their tusks and it was feared that they would become as nearly extinct in other parts of Africa as they are in the region south of the Zambesi. There is no longer any Cape market for ivory; most of the ivory trade now centers in Mozambique.—Youth's Companion.

Genius and Dullness

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

Lesson for September 14

JESUS DRIVEN FROM NAZARETH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:16-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—"He hath anointed me to preach the gospel."—Luke 4:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Visits His Home Town.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Faces a Mob.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Explains His Message.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Mission of Christianity.

I. Jesus in the Synagogue (v. 16).
On the Sabbath day He went into the synagogue according to His custom. He no doubt went that day with a new and definite purpose, but it is refreshing to know that it was according to His habit.

II. Jesus Reading the Scriptures (vv. 17-19).

1. The Book Handed to Him (v. 17).
It was not only His custom to attend the place of worship but to take a part in it. This privilege was not confined to the rabbis (Acts 13:15).

2. The Passage Read (Isaiah 61:1).
2. Most likely this passage was chosen by Him with a specific purpose.

3. The Content of the Passage (vv. 18, 19).

(1) The mission of the Messiah (v. 18). It was:

(a) To preach the gospel to the poor. The good tidings which Jesus proclaimed are peculiarly welcome to the common people.

(b) To heal the broken-hearted. The gospel of Christ peculiarly meets the needs of those whose hearts are crushed by the weight of their own sins or by the burden of sorrow and disappointment.

(c) To preach deliverance to the captives. The gospel of Christ does actually set man free from the slavery of sin (John 8:36).

(d) Recovering of sight to the blind. Christ did actually make those who were physically blind to see (John 9:6, 7) and also opened the eyes of those who were spiritually blind (1 John 5:20).

(e) To set at liberty them that are bruised. The power of Christ can free the most utterly hopeless ones.

(f) To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. The primary allusion is the year of Jubilee (Lev. 25:8-10) in which all those in bondage were released.

(2) The special endowment of the Messiah (v. 18). The reason why the Spirit was upon Him was that He might fulfill specifically His Messianic work. It was not for the display of power. The endowment of the Holy Spirit is not for mere power's sake.

III. Jesus Expounding the Scriptures (vv. 20, 21).

1. He Closed the Book and Sat Down. It seems to have been the custom of the Jewish teachers to sit while teaching.

2. "This Day Is This Scripture Fulfilled." This statement is no doubt but a gist of what He said.

IV. Jesus' Reception by the People (vv. 22-30).

Their reception was characterized by—

1. Ignorant Prejudice (v. 22). "Is not this Joseph's son?" As if to say, "This is our fellow townsman with whom we have been acquainted for years. Surely, therefore, He cannot be the Messiah."

2. Unbelief as to His Supernatural Character (v. 23). They challenged Him to exhibit examples of divine power as He had done in other places.

3. Personal Jealousy (v. 24). Jealousy prevents us from seeing the essential worth of the men in our midst. Foreigners are more appreciative. A prophet is not accepted at home, primarily because he is a prophet. Prophets were sent in times of moral and spiritual declination and their messages were stern rebukes of sin. He adduces two outstanding examples of the willingness of foreigners to believe God.

(1) Elijah was sent to a widow at Sarepta (vv. 25, 26). Many widows of Israel were passed by due, doubtless, to the fact that they would not have received the prophet.

(2) Naaman, the foreigner, of many lepers was the only one cleansed.

4. Violent Hatred (vv. 28-30). This comparison of the Jews to foreigners so stunned their pride that they madly drove Him out of their city, even tried to kill Him. He showed them that just as Elijah had brought blessing to one who lived in Sidon and Elisha to one in Syria, while the people of Israel went on suffering, even so the Gentiles would receive the blessings of His saving power while they, the chosen nation, would suffer in unbelief.

Religion

Religion, in one sense, is a life of self-denial; but self-denial does not belong to religion as characteristic of it, it belongs to human life. The lower nature must always be denied when we are trying to rise to a higher sphere.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Truths

Truths once discovered shine by their own light and give real knowledge about a real world.—W. J. Moulton, D.D.

Novelties Are in Fashion Picture

In this intermediate season some unfamiliar and entertaining things are disclosed in the shops, the small, intimate places where exclusive novelties are shown and where odds and ends are to be found, says a fashion authority in the New York Times.

Combs are to be all the rage next season, judging from the attractive novelties that are offered in the shops and department stores patronized by the elite. The most diverting styles are shown; large ornate affairs of various kinds, in ivory, shell or filigree work in metal cord of the most delicate materials. There are combs overlaid with a floral pattern in gilt ribbon; combs studded with semi-precious stones and combs covered with "stardust." They are in many colors.

Just how these large hair ornaments will be adjusted to bobbed coiffures is not apparent, but that there is a demand worthy of attention is obvious.

Bandeaux are shown to engage the fancy of the lady of shorn locks; there are beautiful brilliant ornaments in rhinestones and pearls, classic models in gilt and silver color and the daintiest flower fillets, among an elaborate collection offering many styles to suit as many costumes.

The vogue of the Spanish shawl and its many variants has made popular its traditional accessory, the Spanish comb, or some form of appropriate garniture for the hair, quite different from the simple headress that was fashionable a few seasons ago.

Original ideas would seem to have been exhausted in necklaces, yet the most captivating examples keep coming to meet the popular demand. Nothing is lovelier than a full-chain conventional necklace length of graduated beads of rose quartz. Others of crystal quartz are emblems of cool summer starlight, and some are cubes alternating on a thin string, with beads of jade, aquamarine, topaz or shapely cut jet. An objet d'art is a necklace formed of large beads of Chinese jade, and beads of ivory, beautifully traced in brown lines, with a pendant of jade from which is suspended a large tassel of jade-green silk.

The popularity of ostrich has brought out some unique and exceedingly catchy forms of trimming for dressy costumes. For evening gowns of thin material (tulle, georgette, gauze and the thin crepes) are shown beautiful motifs—long, trailing sprays of the feathery stuff, and large clusters.

New versions of the Spanish shawl seem to come out almost weekly. The latest is black and white, done in large scroll patterns and in entire scenes, hand-painted or embroidered on a solid background. The label, Spanish, attaches to many lovely things in wraps for day and evening wear in the picturesque scarfs and shawls, heavily embroidered and fringed, that give a look of distinction to the most inconspicuous costume. They are of various origins, French, Italian, Russian, English, Scandinavian, and most are pretty and unusual.

New Fall Portrait Hat Has Wing-Shaped Brim

Fashionable Apparel as Noted in Style Centers

A fashion authority who has returned recently from style centers abroad, says the Kansas City Star, brings back these authoritative highlights of fashionable dress: Flared skirts are worn longer in back than in front. Sometimes heavy fringes make the flounce. Instead of the fabric of the dress. The introduction of long, tight-fitting lace sleeves in mousquetaire effect is an important feature of semi-formal gowns.

One of the novelties of the season is a detachable "choker" that buttons at one side. It usually is made of some fur, matched by detachable cuffs on the dress. The only trimming that some of the smartest evening gowns have is heavy silver ribbon attached to the shoulders and tying at the waistline in back.

Furs and Feathers.
From the dawn of human history furs and feathers have been used to satisfy our taste and need for clothing and adornment. Our most primitive ancestors were connoisseurs in the plumage of birds and the pelts of animals and admired them for their possibilities in furnishing himself and his family with raiment and adornment, and so do we.

GETS CREDIT FOR INVENTION IN 1810

Clerk Was First to Devise Boxes in Post Office.

Washington.—Thomas Brown, a clerk in the Richmond (Va.) post office in 1810, has been given official credit for having invented the "post office box."

While there are no Post Office department records to show that Brown was the first to make and put the post office box in use, there is nothing on file to disprove the claim made for him by his great-granddaughter, Miss Mary D. Lewis of Tallahassee, Fla.

Postmaster General New, therefore, has replied to a letter from Miss Lewis presenting the claim by stating he is ready to give Brown the benefit of the doubt and acknowledge him as the inventor.

Brown's memoirs published some time after his death, fully set forth the circumstances leading to the invention. He wrote:

"I was the inventor or planner of post office boxes. These were times of embargo, nonintercourse, etc., and, of course speculation was rife. The first news was important and therefore there was always a great rush to the post office as soon as the mail came in, for letters."

"The universal plan was to hand out letters from a round pane of glass from the front window. I have seen the whole street blocked by people waiting their turn to get to the window to ask for letters."

Brown was asked to devise a plan to remedy the situation. He did so by fitting a partition across a large room, filling it with pigeonholes covered at one end with glass with each hole numbered in front and bearing the name of the box-holder at the open end. About 400 boxes were quickly engaged at 50 cents for each three months.

Brown's plan is still utilized in post offices throughout the smaller cities and towns of the country.

Aged Woman to Fight for Unsettled Estate

Camden, N. J.—The myth of a $1,000,000,000 estate remaining unsettled in New York was revived by the announcement by Miss Irene Powers, eighty-two years old, of Camden, that she intended to try to obtain a portion of the land supposed to have been left by Anneke Jans Bogardus. She said that she still hoped to share in the property, which comprises 62 acres between Broadway and the Hudson river, and includes the sites of the Woolworth building, Trinity church and other structures.

Although she has knowledge of the many futile attempts of this kind, in the past, Miss Powers insists that she will pass her remaining years seeking to obtain millions which she declares are hers by right of inheritance.

Anneke Jans Bogardus inherited the property from her first husband, Roelof Jans, who bought it in 1636. She was supposed to have left the property under a 99-year lease to its occupants, with the understanding that it would revert to her heirs when the period expired. Actually, the property was transferred to the governor of the province, and later presented to Trinity church by Queen Anne.

On this flimsy evidence thousands of descendants of Anneke Jans have made attempts to acquire riches. The claim was outlawed by the New York State Court of Appeals in 1856, and again in 1881. Swindlers have repeatedly capitalized the story by luring supposed heirs into schemes for recovering the estate.

Standing Room Only Puts "Pep" in the Turk

Constantinople.—The new prefect of Constantinople, Emin Bey, to instill the spirit of "hustle" into the prefecture officials, has given orders that no chairs be allowed in any office except the chairs occupied by the officials themselves.

This is intended to discourage the inveterate habit of Turkish officials of comfortably installing their business visitors, treating them to coffee, and gossiping interminably without getting down to business.

Change Names at Will

Riga.—A recent decree of the central soviet authorities grants every Russian citizen over eighteen years the right to change his family name and his first name as often as he pleases, with full legal validity, simply by notifying the registrar of the community.

First Mail Plane Motor to Museum

Washington.—The engine used in a Blériot monoplane to carry the first aerial mail in the United States has been presented to the Smithsonian Institution by Earl Ovington, a Santa Barbara (Cal.) aviator, who, in 1911, was sworn in as the first aerial postman.

The official document, bearing the signature of Postmaster General Hitchcock and Chief Inspector Morgan of New York also will be presented to the institution, together with a sample of mail carried on the first trip and a photograph of the plane.

H. BISHOP GIVEN DIES SUDDENLY

Hemorrhage Causes Death of One of City's Prominent Merchants.

Was a Former Patrolman on the Washington, D. C. Police Force Has Successfully Conducted a Gas, Oil and Tire Business on West Main Street.

H. Bishop Given died at his home on the Lancaster pike in Washington township this morning at 6:15 o'clock. The deceased had been ill for the past ten years. His death was due to a hemorrhage.

Deceased was born in this city June 9, 1887. He was the son of John P. and Emma Hassenpflug Given. He married Miss Winifred C. Baker, at Norfolk, Virginia, in September, 1906. Besides his wife one son and three daughters survive. They are H. Bishop Jr., Winifred C., Virginia B. and Lydia L. Given.

Of his immediate family one brother and three sisters are living. They are: Mary, wife of B. T. Hedges, of this city; Martha, wife of Albert E. Herrstein, of Chillicothe; Grace, wife of R. C. Ferguson of Columbus, and Ralph M. Given, of Columbus.

The funeral services will be held at his late home Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and will be private. Rev. F. E. Logee will officiate. Interment in Forest cemetery.

The pallbearers will be B. T. Hedges, Albert E. Herrstein, Ralph M. Given and R. C. Ferguson.

The passing of Mr. Given takes one of this city's youngest and liveliest merchants. After reaching manhood he went east and became a member of the Washington D. C. police department where he served actively seven years. Some ten years ago he was injured, being struck across the kidneys in an accident. Altho this incapacitated him from active work he pushed along and was active in business affairs. He had been pensioned by the government on account of his injury received in the police service.

Mr. Given came back to his native home several years ago and entered the tire and oil business in which he made quite a success. Recently he took a partner in the business, Frank Palm, and they have built up a nice oil, gas and tire business on West Main street.

STEAM NAVIGATION ON SCIOTO.

"The superior, fast sailing S. B. (steam boat) Tiosco, A. H. Keef master, will positively sail from the port of Columbus between the 25th and 28th of this month, weather permitting, for Ripley, Portsmouth and the several intermediate landings. The Tiosco was built in Columbus in superior manner and of the best materials, being timbered and iron fastened. She has excellent accommodations for cabin passengers, being very lofty between decks, and is sufficiently capacious to contain several small families. For freight or passage apply to the captain on board or to Smith & Barney, State street."

Sounds quite nautical, doesn't it? Might be supposed that it was issued in some seaport. But it wasn't. It is a copy of an advertisement appearing in Columbus newspapers on the date of March 6, 1848, embellished with a picture of a steamboat, tho hardly the Tiosco. It was the early days, when local people fondly imagined that the Scioto was, as the government maps made it, actually a navigable river. The name of the craft was evidently framed by a rearrangement of the letters of the word Scioto.

How the voyage turned out is a fact lost to history. Mention of the sailing of the Tiosco on this trip in the newspapers, shows that it actually sailed but whether she ever reached her destination, or made further trips is not known. The Tiosco does not stand alone in the record of steam navigation on the Scioto in the early days. As late as 1843 a steamboat named the Experiment was advertised to make trips on this water and in 1849 the American appears in the advertisements. The later made excursions in the summer months up the Scioto and Oentangy from here "as far as the water would permit."—J. H. Galbraith in Dispatch.

The government hydrographic maps of this state, shows the Scioto river to be a navigable stream. It probably refers to smaller boats, such as skiffs, canoes and flatbottom boats. In early days of water transportation, flat bottom boats and even rafts were floated down the Scioto to Portsmouth to meet Ohio river steamers.

About the time of the Civil war, a steamboat came up during high waters as far as the railroad bridge, south of the city.

Some forty or more years ago, a steamboat which drew about two feet of water carried excursion parties up the river as far as the Red bridge. This boat was chartered by a party of picnickers one day and before it got fifty feet from shore, it struck some submerged piling in mid stream just north of the bridge, keeled over and sank. The excursionists about ten in number swam to shore on beer kegs, causing a great deal of merriment to bystanders, who ran to the river to see the sight. There was no fatalities. This boat was later taken to Buckeye Lake.

AMUSEMENTS

A fat man actor.

There is one fat man in dramatic work and he does comedy, but it's not slap-stick. He puts the comedy in comedy drama. He has furnished the comedy relief in many dramatic productions—who is he?

Walter Heirs, the man whose motto is "laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep, and you weep alone"—Walter Heirs, star of the Paramount pictures, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" and "Sixty Cents an Hour," and featured in George Melford's "Flaming Barriers," is the man of whom we speak—Walter of the generous girth, who comes to the Met theater tonight in his latest starring picture for Paramount, "Fair Week."

Heirs is practically the only fat man in dramatic work—not that he plays dramatic roles—not by a long shot. His part is to put the laughs into a picture. "Fair Week" is a comedy drama, with the accent on the comedy. It's the funniest thing Heirs has ever done, but there's drama, too, don't fool yourself about that—if rescuing a little girl, while hanging by your knees from the trapeze of a swaying balloon over a thousand feet in the air, means anything.

Constance Wilson, sister of Lois and who also played in "The Covered Wagon" is Mr. Heir's leading woman. Others in the cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, Carmen Phillips and Mary Jane Irving.

Bob Wagner directed the production.

THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME.

"The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" has been produced with a marvelous exactitude to the lines of the book of the same name, generally acclaimed John Fox Jr.'s masterpiece. The primitive instincts, the mountain feuds, their quaint vernacular, and high sense of honor are powerfully portrayed and thru all runs a clear strain of sentiment and love made beautiful in its own simplicity. The cast has been chosen with the utmost care. At the Lyceum theater, Columbus, the week of September 14. Daily matinee.

ART TREASURES IN OLD BURIAL SPOT

Discoveries Date From English Pre-Christian Era.

At Bidford-on-Avon, a Saxon burial ground dating from the pre-Christian era of England has been discovered. The cemetery lies on the north bank of the Avon, and in this ground 214 burials are recorded. They include people of all ages and both sexes, principally young. The number of really old people is small. The bodies were extended, facing generally north; the interments were regular and methodical, and usually from two feet six inches to three feet from the surface.

Notwithstanding their burial of 1,400 years many of the skeletons are splendidly preserved. Henri Picard writes in the Cincinnati Enquirer. In two instances practically every bone is present. The skulls and teeth are remarkable—the former dolichocephalic in character, and the latter showing almost an entire absence of caries. The teeth usually closed edge to edge, and by the middle aged showed excessive signs of erosion from the coarse and gritty food which formed their diet. Often the tissues were worn down to the nerve chambers, where a dentine of repair as hard as enamel was formed simultaneously to protect the nutrient organ.

In almost every instance the arrangement of the teeth was perfectly symmetrical, without the crowding and the narrowing of the jaws, the product of our modern civilization. The chins and jaws were well developed, and the remains showed our ancestors to have been splendid specimens of manhood.

The men were buried with their spears, lances and long knives or daggers lying by their sides, and on the left breast was an iron umbo which originally protected the shield. With the woman was generally found her jewelry, bronze brooches, beautiful necklaces and a food pot on her right hand with a small food knife. The necklaces discovered were numerous, consisting of blue, red, white and green glass beads or of pieces of amber, some of great size, with often a large crystal pendant, or a few Roman coins or paste beads with zoomorphic designs.

The bronze brooches, many of great size, were typical of pre-Christian Anglo-Saxon art; many were large and varied in shape, from the plain square-headed brooches, attributed to about the year A. D. 500, to the beautiful and highly ornamented heavily gilded saucer-shaped brooches, with a variety of designs, as the star and sun with rays patterns, and numerous complex zoomorphic forms, all showing a west Saxon origin. There are two perfect, large brooches with a Swastika pattern, evidently of Eastern origin. It is regarded as an emblem of the sun, sacred in many parts of the world from the earliest times.

There are pretty bronze and silver finger rings, polished jewels, quite modern in appearance, a pendant of a beaver's tooth, suggesting that the animal then frequented the River Avon. One glorious, massive square-headed brooch is a unique example of the art of this people, whom we have regarded as primitive. It is five and a quarter inches in length, ornamented with a maze of wonderful design and highly gilded, and is as bright and perfect as on the day it was buried 1,400 years ago.

Two extraordinary pendantlike ornaments of unusual pattern are of exceptional interest. One represents two intertwined snakes with open mouths; the other, circular in form, shows twenty snakes arranged within the circle, with open mouths pointing to the periphery, and bodies intertwined, with tails pointing to the center. It is most unusual to see the natural snake form represented, although the serpentine zoomorphic ornament is quite common.

Great Writer's Ideal

Beatrice Portinari was an Italian woman of rare beauty and loveliness of character, immortalized by Dante in his "Divine Comedy." In his "Vita Nuova," the poet tells how he first set eyes on "the glorious lady of his heart, Beatrice," he being at the time nine years old, and she a few months younger. There is no evidence that his love was ever returned. Beatrice, at an early age, married Simone de Bardi; but neither this nor the poet's subsequent marriage ever interfered with his pure and exalted love for her. This love even became intensified after her death, which occurred June 9, 1290.—Kansas City Star.

Off in Geography

A vaudeville entertainer who was looking for a song to feature, was observed shaking his head dubiously over some sheet music. His partner, the other half of the sketch, came along and wanted to know what he had.

"Another Dixie song by a foreign writer."

"Well, what's wrong with it?"

"Oh, nothing much. He's got the Suwanee river located in California."

Rabbits Ruin Trees

Reports reaching Juneau, Alaska, from the interior tell of the serious damage done to young forest trees by hordes of snowshoe rabbits infesting the Northland this winter. In the absence of grass and herbs for food the rabbits are gnawing the bark of birch, larch, cottonwood, cedar, hemlock and fir. These trees, completely girdled by the rodents' teeth, are sure to die in the spring.

SALT CREEK VALLEY.

The second annual Crites school reunion was a grand success in every respect. There were three hundred present with their smiling faces and how do you do and where do you live? They were there from Columbus, Chillicothe, Lancaster, Pickerington, Ashville, Amanda, Groveport, Circleville, London, Lithopolis, Kingston, Laurelville, Adelphi, Whisler and Tilton. Everyone came with well filled baskets and when the good eats were spread out in the agricultural room of the school building it looked as though every one was very liberal. There were 50 large cakes and a bushel of lemons and young fried chicken galore. Every one did justice during the noon hour and there were plenty for all. In the afternoon a well arranged program was rendered in the auditorium, which was filled to its utmost capacity. Music was furnished by the splendid Laurel-Adel orchestra which every one enjoyed immensely. Most excellent talks were given by Miss Anna Pontious one of our retired successful teachers and Cyrus McCoy of Lancaster, and others. A silver collection was taken up to defray expenses which amounted to $15 which will give our treasurer a nice little sum to start with. The same officers were elected for the ensuing year. Next year's reunion will be held at the old Crites school house on the grounds where so many of us spent our childhood days, the happiest days of our life.

Following is the program rendered in the afternoon:

The homecoming at the Tarlton M. E. church Thursday was a grand success in every respect. The attendance was excellent. The White Ribbon quartet of Plain City was right on the job and they did sing too. In the afternoon quite a number of excellent speakers were present. At the noon hour an inviting picnic dinner was served which was very much enjoyed by all present.

Miss Jeannette Strous left Saturday for Leroy, Ohio, where she has been engaged to teach in the public schools at that place.

KINGSTON.

Miss Carrie Umsted spent from Friday to Monday with Miss Martha West in Chillicothe.

Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Neff spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Fox, of Columbus.

Miss Bernadine Storer is at home with her parents for a few days.

The Missionary society met at the

The Old Nantucketer.

The Nantucketer, he alone resides and riots on the sea. . . . There is his home; there lies his business, which a Noah's flood would not interrupt though it overwhelmed all the millions of China. He lives on the sea, as prairie cocks in the prairie; he hides among the waves, he climbs them as chamolus hunters climb the Alps. For years he knows not the land; so that when he comes to it at last, it smells like another world, more strangely than the moon would to an Englishman. With the landless gull, that at sunset folds her wings and is rocked to sleep between billows; so at nightfall, the Nantucketer, out of sight of land, furls his sails, and lays him to his rest, while under his very pillow rush herds of walrus and whales.—Herman Melville.

Feats of Strength.

There have recently come to light some extraordinary feats of strength by a Hindoo woman, who is declared by competent observers to be a person of greater physical prowess than the renowned Sandow. The woman in question is Miss Tarabai, born some thirty years ago in a village in Rajputana. One of her remarkable feats is to lie upon the ground and permit a cart laden with men to be drawn across her chest and arms. Suspended between two chairs by her head and feet, Miss Tarabai had a stone weighing a quarter of a ton placed upon her chest, while two men pounded upon it with heavy sledge hammers.

Manganese.

Manganese is found in Japan in three forms: Metallic, which is over 50 per cent pure manganese, being used principally in the making of certain kinds of iron and steel and as an amalgam; dioxide, or "black manganese," having as high as 90 per cent manganese and largely used in the making of chemicals, drugs, paints and electric batteries; and carbonate ore, which until recently has been a waste product in Japan.

New Management.

We wish to announce the selection of Mr. C. G. Chalfin as the new manager of our Circleville office to supervise our entire Pickaway County business.

Mr. Chalfin comes to us highly recommended and with manifest ability in business.

If you are one of the many people who know how to use borrowed money, in amounts of $25 to $500, to your own profit and advantage, be sure to call and become acquainted with Mr. Chalfin. You will find him friendly, courteous, obliging and keen to assist in solving your money problems.

Our business is to finance people of moderate means who can not qualify for regular bank credit. Mr. Chalfin will show you how.

Enormous Power From Spring.
Not far from the town of Twin Falls, in Idaho, is a spring that runs a big electrical plant. It is called the Thousand spring, and there is nothing like it to be found anywhere else in the world. What a tremendous spring it is may be judged from the fact that it delivers almost 1,000 cubic feet of water a second--enough water to supply all the needs of the city of New York. It flows out of a lava cliff at a considerable height, like the waterfall of a stream, and provides power which, converted into electricity, is distributed for lighting and other purposes over an extensive area.

Frankly Discussing Natural Gas Facts

What Fuel is Cheapest?

If Natural Gas was no longer available, what fuel would you adopt to supply your household needs in such a situation?

If natural gas was no longer available what fuel would you adopt to supply your household needs in such a situation.

Would you choose manufactured gas with its low heating efficiency and high price? or

Would you resort to coal oil with the attendant necessity of handling and the ever-present food contaminating odor emanating from it? or

Would you employ gasoline with the hazard of explosive accident in the limited use that could be made of it in your home? or

Would you go back to the use of coal with its attendant heavy labor, dust, dirt and destruction of furnishings? or

Would electricity be your choice, and if so, could you afford to bear the expense of equipping your home with electrical appliances, and pay the very great additional expense in the use of current for household needs?

We call your attention to the accompanying statements of cost of various fuels employed in the home. One is from so eminent authority as the United States Fuel Administration, and the other from the Home Economics Department of Ohio State University. You can not doubt the reliability of these agencies, and their statements may be taken as absolutely correct.

You must realize fully that the figures given prove beyond any reasonable doubt that natural gas is the cheapest fuel, and that the prolongation of its use is of vastly more importance than any other problem affecting the domestic tranquility of households now supplied with this most admirable fuel.

WORTH OF NATURAL GAS

The following are the quantities of substitutes necessary to furnish the same heating energy as one thousand cubic feet of natural gas:

Manufactured gas 2,000 cu. ft.
Gasoline 9 gallons
Kerosene 8½ gallons
Alcohol 15 gallons
Electricity 322 Kilowatt hours

From the following comparisons made by the United States Fuel Administration you may estimate your increased expense, when, at no far distant day, natural gas will no longer be available.

"Natural Gas at $1.12 per thousand is equivalent to coal at $6.50 per ton."
"Natural Gas at $2.20 per thousand is equivalent to electricity at 3c per K.W."
"Natural Gas at $2.00 per thousand is equivalent to gasoline at 27c per gal."
"Natural Gas at $2.40 per thousand is equivalent to coal oil at 15c per gal."

Tests made by Home Economics Department, Ohio State University:

HARTMAN THEATER

Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular dramatic production, "The Ten Commandments" will begin the third and final week of its engagement at the Hartman theater tomorrow with two performances at 2:20 and 8:20 and will follow the same schedule thruout the rest of the week. This will, however, positively be the final week, as bookings at the Hartman prevent further continuance of the run.

Inasmuch as the production will not be shown in any other theater in Columbus this season, local theatergoers will have to avail themselves of the remaining performances next week or wait at least another year and probably two years to see it again. The production is accompanied by complete symphony orchestra at all performances.

Volcano Worth Owning

Prince Glinori-Conti of Italy has on his estates an old volcano which no longer spouts lava but which does blow out a great deal of steam and hot water. By boring holes in the ground the prince collects this steam and makes it drive electric generators. He gets power totaling more than 3,000-horse power. Out of the steam, after it has condensed, he extracts valuable quantities of boric acid, the familiar drug used in eye drops.

Two Bachelors Gained Nothing—but Vamp Did

By CHARLES BRIGGS

FROM the moment when Henry Mills saw a copy of the "Matrimonial Register" in the back of his neighbor and friend, Jim Bates, a sudden hostility took the place of his former warm regard. He glanced over the paper and thrust it back into its hiding place just as Bates entered.

After a few indifferent remarks about the crops, he took his departure. Mills flung himself down upon his bed in deep disgust. He took a copy of the "Matrimonial Register," which he had secreted under his mattress, and looked through it. One paragraph especially caught his eye:

"I want to be married as soon as possible. My name is Estelle Read, residence Baltimore, age twenty-four. I am a brunette, tall and considered good-looking. Am well educated, can dance and play the piano, have a passion for country life and should like to make a happy home for my husband upon some ranch in the West. Have a fortune of $10,000, but cannot touch it till I am twenty-five."

The paragraph was marked with the imprint of Bates' thumbs.

"The darned cuss!" muttered Mills. "Thought he'd steal a march on me, didn't he? But here's where he plays second fiddle!"

From the same hiding place he extracted a letter, which ran as follows: "Dear Friend: From what you have written to me I fancy you are just the gentleman who would make me a good husband. Especially am I fascinated by your charming description of country life. I inclose you my photograph, as you request. Now, friend, there is one little particular that must be said, though it goes to my heart to say it. I am all alone in the world and working for my daily bread. My guardian does not want me to get married and he will not advance me any of my money. I shall have to ask you to remit me $100 for my expenses and $100 more if you wish me to arrive with a trousseau. Yours lovingly,

"ESTELLE." The photograph was of a tall and statuesque brunette, and he gazed ardently upon it several times.

The neighbors were not slow to perceive the coolness that grew between the erstwhile cronies, but they attributed it to jealousy. For Mills was building a substantial addition to his cabin and rushing it up as fast as he could. When next he strolled over toward his former friend's house he was amazed to see that the little shack was also being transformed and Bates attired in a brand new suit of clothes.

"Going in for a wife, eh, Jim?" he called jocularly.

"Well, I don't know as I might, Hank," answered the other. "Maybe there's a girl down East—"

The rest of Jim's words were spoken to the air, for Henry Mills was hurrying away as fast as he could go. He was determined to raise that second hundred at once and send it.

A letter was waiting for him. It was in the same fluent handwriting. "Dear Friend," it ran. "Yours received, and thank you so much for the journey money. Now, Henry, let us be frank with one another. My clothes are all worn out, and I am too much of a lady to start out to be married in shabby things, so I must have another hundred and fifty, or else I may have to consider a proposal I have from somebody who doesn't live a thousand miles away from you."

Henry Mills sent $150 and implored Estelle to come out on the next train. After that it was weary waiting before the long-expected letter arrived.

This is what he read:

"Dear Friend: My heart bleeds for me to have to tell you what I must tell you, but since your letter came I have met the man of my choice and we are married. He is taking me on our honeymoon to Europe, and we shall probably be back in two years' time. So no more from your former friend, "ESTELLE."

She did not inclose the $250 that he had sent. Altogether, including the house and the furniture, Henry Mills was "out" in the neighborhood of $1,200.

He sat there in a lethargy of despair for a long time. But suddenly there came a thought that cheered him. He saddled his horse hastily and rode over to Jim's. He knocked at the door.

"Come in," muttered a hollow voice. Henry went in. Jim Bates was lying upon his new lounge, a letter on the floor beside him. As his old friend entered he struggled to his feet.

Henry Mills looked at the letter and seemed to recognize the handwriting. And suddenly a whoop escaped his lips and, without even a "by-your-leave" he snatched it up and perused it.

It was couched in identical language with the one which he had had an hour before.

Suddenly the same thought seemed to come into Jim Bates' mind, for his scowl relaxed and gave place to a broad grin and his hand went out toward his old crony's.

"Same with you, Hank?" he asked. "Same here," said the other. "Say, Jim, will you be round for a pipeful after supper?"

"Sure thing," answered his friend, pitching a piece of paper into the stove. "And say, Hank, we'll put our feet upon the table and be real comfortable."

One Department Awake

Some departments of the government may be said, with justice, to fall asleep occasionally on the job, but one Detroit housewife is willing to testify to the wide-awakeness of the United States bureau of animal industry. The housewife had ordered a set of dishes from London, England, and long before their arrival was the recipient of a letter from the bureau stating a case of goods, packed in straw and excelsior had been consigned to her and adding that, because of the danger of importing germs of the hoof-and-mouth disease into the country, the straw must be destroyed. However, the bureau heads did not trust to the housewife's discretion in burning the packing. She was requested to notify the local bureau of the consignment's arrival, whereupon an inspector would call to see personally to the destruction of the straw.—Detroit Free Press.

Healthy Complexion Assured.

Martha was a pale little wife whose white cheeks indicated her listless condition. Her husband worried about her lack of bloom till Cousin Helen came from the East for a visit. Martha improved wonderfully with bright companionship. Her husband was not slow to express his gratitude to his wife's cousin. "Helen, you can't imagine how much good your visit has done Martha. She looks ten years younger." "Well, I am so glad, Cousin George," Helen babbled. "And if she keeps on using that rouge I'm leaving her she'll always have that healthy complexion, like mine."—Exchange.

Much-Traveled Bottles.

Knowledge of the direction and speed of ocean currents is of great importance to navigators. Since it is very difficult to measure these directly, the United States hydrographic office accomplishes it approximately by means of what are known as "bottle papers." These are small paper slips with directions for their return to the proper authorities printed in the principal languages of civilization. They are given to vessel captains, sealed in bottles, and thrown overboard with the time and place they were put over noted on them. After months or years they come back to Washington. One drifted nearly across the Atlantic and back. Another made a drift across the widest part of the Pacific, taking more than two years, another dropped near the Cape of Good Hope, was picked up on the west coast of Australia.

CONNETT HATS

The Season's Hat

THE Connett "Rutand" is proving to be one of the most popular of the season's distinctive hats. It is a perfectly proportioned hat of fine quality. Its outstanding feature is the fact that it looks well on all types of men, with its rather low-set brim, designed to be worn in its original shape or turned down. Try on the "Rutand."

Since 1815 the Connetts have been manufacturing felt hats in which quality and distinction have been uppermost. The accumulated experience of one hundred and nine years has built up an enviable reputation for Connett Hats throughout the most exclusive stores. It is conceded that where their name appears you will find real hat value.

The large Fall assortment we carry will make it easy for you to choose a becoming hat. It will be a pleasure to help make your selection.

Latins Make Much of Fair-Haired Beauties

The ability to admire a stunning woman without flying off the handle is a gift of Anglo-Saxon manhood that is greatly appreciated by American beauties after a taste of the embarrassments that await a blond in a Latin country.

Such is the power of fair-haired comeliness over Mediterranean masculinity that a lone woman of Nordic race is likely to be startled and alarmed at being forced to run a distressing gauntlet of undisguised admiration from total strangers.

When a respectable Latin catches sight of a golden-haired charmer he goes utterly mad. He can't take his eyes off her, but is impelled to pirouette around her like a Japanese dancing mouse and tell the world how magnificent she is.

A New York woman who returned home recently after a visit to Italy relates that one day when she was "window shopping" she became aware that two men were following her. She was able with some concentration to muster up enough knowledge of Italian to understand snatches of their gesticulating conversation, and found that she was the subject. The short man wobbled alongside of the fat one and sighed as he remarked to his companion:

"Such beauty—she is like a white rose."

The fat one rolled his dark eyes and contradicted him.

"But no, see how her cheeks flush—she is like a pink rose."

"She is like an angel," ejaculated Fatty.

These tributes to her beauty were entirely wasted on the fair American. When she neared an officer of the law she wheeled around, pointed the two men out and demanded that they be arrested.

The officer looked at the late, flushed complainant, who made a ravishing picture, and with a bow announced to her:

"Signorina, I cannot arrest these men. They should be complimented. They have been guilty of doing nothing but showing excellent judgment and appreciation of beauty."—New York Sun.

Take to English Sports

Without propaganda or special publicity sports which had their origin in Britain were taken across to the continent as a novel experiment, first of all as a curious example of Anglo-Saxon lunacy, says the Montreal Herald. And in a little while the penetrated nations realized that they had caught the infection and that it was chronic.

The Englishman, the missionary of physical endeavor for pure glory's sake, had done a big thing—the accomplishment was complete almost before it was realized. Even Germany had, just before the war, taken it up in quite Prussian fashion, as a desirable state activity.

It is a significant fact today that the nations which we least understand, which are about last to win our sympathy or interest, are countries like Russia and Turkey, which have no national sport in any form and which never look like adopting them.

Tit for Tat

Dr. George McE. Lunn, the Samoan missionary, said at a missionary meeting in Denver:

"They tell a story in the Marquesas about a chief named Tusit-vall-yala, who was baptized by a French missionary priest. The priest, finding the chief's name hard to handle, baptized him Jean.

"Now, chief," he concluded, "your name is Jean, remember, and you must never eat meat on Friday—only fish."

"Tusit-vall-yala was none too pleased, perhaps, to lose his high-sounding name. Anyhow the missionary found him, the very next Friday, eating roast pig.

"Jean, Jean, eating pig on a fast day!" he cried.

"But the chief laughed easily.

"No, no! I no eat pig," he said, "I put him in water and christen him fish."—Detroit Free Press.

Fictitious Marvels

There recently appeared in Vancouver, B. C., a man who was credited with performing marvelous cures. Thousands attended his meetings, and tremendous stories went about as to his powers. Finally twelve honest and capable men investigated him, and discovered that not a single marvelous thing could be credited to him; that the thousands who told wonderful tales were indulging in plain falsehood. This is also the history of every other marvelous thing.—From E. W. Howe's Monthly.

National Forest Visitor

The prominent part the 146 national forests play in the recreational activities and outdoor life is emphasized by the fact that almost 10,000,000 persons visited these forests during 1923, according to the final tabulation made by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

The importance of the automobile as a means of conveyance to recreation seekers is shown by the further fact that more than eight out of ten forest visitors, or more than 8,000,000, came in privately-owned cars.

Gum Industry Growing

The great American industry of manufacturing chewing gum from chicle, which now represents an invested capital of $25,000,000, dates back to the year 1860, when the original industry was started on an outlay of $65.

SIGHT OF CHILDREN IS BEING NEGLECTED

Small Percentage Receives
Tests, Says Survey.

New York.—Only 4,227,702 of the 24,000,000 school children in the United States received eye tests in 1923, according to a preliminary report issued by the Eye Sight Conservation Council of America embodying the initial findings of a nationwide survey of eye conservation in education and industry.

The survey, which covers the results of testing the eyes of more than 10,000,000 students extending over a period of 16 years, discloses, it is asserted, that the eyesight of children in the public schools throughout the nation is being neglected.

"The eyesight of children in the public schools throughout the United States is not being given proper attention," says the report. "Even simple tests to detect the most evident cases of defective vision are not made generally. A very low percentage of the total enrollment receives eyesight tests of any kind. In the schools where tests are made there are wide differences in the results obtained. This indicates that in many schools the tests are made very superficially and that a uniform procedure is not observed in making the tests."

Cause of Retardation.

John J. Tigert, United States commissioner of education, and a member of the board of councilors of the Eye Sight Conservation Council, says that defective vision is believed to contribute toward retardation. Commenting on the disclosure of the survey, which, he points out, should tend to develop an important field of education which has been too long neglected, Commissioner Tigert declares:

"The establishment of a consciousness of the need of attacking physical defects among our school children as a part of our educational program can scarcely be over emphasized. This is peculiarly true with reference to eyesight, because defective vision interferes more with educational progress than any other defect of sensation."

"Experience has clearly established that tests for defective vision may be carried out advantageously by the teachers. It is important to emphasize that suitable provisions are not now made for training teachers, school nurses and health inspectors in the methods of making tests. The council is doing a splendid thing in helping to secure such provision."

The data from which the council's report was prepared was gathered from widely different sources, including reports of state departments of education and state boards of health since 1907, covering 6,600,000 eye examinations, and municipal reports since 1907 covering 3,500,000 examinations. The most recent statistics were obtained through data obtained from public schools of 247 cities.

Few Receive Tests.

"Only a small number of school children receive periodic eyesight tests at regular intervals," continues the council's report. The council has verified this statement in two ways, first by a summary of replies from state officials and second by a summary of replies from city school superintendents.

Simple visual acuity tests reveal that 25 per cent of the school children in the United States have manifest defects of vision and symptoms of eye-strain. More thorough examinations indicate that over 50 per cent of school children have eye defect of sufficient degree to warrant correction. There is no uniform method for testing eyesight, says the report.

Eye tests as made in the public schools are merely tests for keenness of vision and reveal but a portion of eye errors, according to the council, which says that especially in children a large proportion of eye defects are hidden, and while the child is contending with the defect, his keenness of vision is not affected.

Gold Prospectors Cause Excitement in Rhodesia

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia.—Gold prospecting is very active throughout Rhodesia and so keen are the prospectors in pegging out claims that eight of them slept throughout the freezing cold one night on the site of a dead miner's forfeited gold claim, known as Mick's Luck, near Essex Vale, at one time the home of the famous explorer F. C. Selous.

As soon as it was daylight there was a wild stampede among the men to erect the customary notices. Motor-cars had arrived for two of the competing amateurs, who apparently thought that first registration of a claim at the mines office in Bulawayo established a prior right to it. These two men had a furious race to Bulawayo, covering the distance of 30 miles over the rough veldt road in 45 minutes.

Wealthy Man Creates New Town in Ulster

Belfast.—Newtownkelly is the name of a new town which has sprung from the venture of Sir Samuel Kelly, wealthy mine owner, and which is said to be the greatest commercial undertaking ever attempted single handed in Ireland.

He has successfully prospected for coal, sunk two deep shafts, constructed overhead equipment and laid eight railway sidings. Colliers which he brought from Cumberland and Scotland live in the new town.
